Fatimid princesses endowed palaces and religious institutions throughout the realm. In Cairo we know that a hall in the Western Palace was designated to Sitt al-Mulk, the sister of Caliph al-Hakim, and that it was lined with carved wooden panelling embellished with scenes of court life and hunting. Sayyida Ulam al-Ameriyya, the wife of the caliph, al-Amir bi-Ahkam Allah (r. 495–524 / 1101–30) constructed an ornamental shrine for the venerated Sayyida Ruqayya, daughter of the Imam ‘Ali Ibn Abi Talib, the fourth Righteously Guided Caliph (Rashidun). It was decorated with kufic calligraphy commemorating her patronage. The shrine was furnished with a magnificent wooden pulpit constructed out of qaru and Indian teak.

Name: Mihrab
Dynasty: Hegira 6th century / AD 12th century Fatimid
Details: Museum of Islamic Art
Cairo, Egypt
Justification: A mihrab (prayer niche) given to the shrine of Sayyida Ruqayya, by Ulam al-Ameriyya, the wife of the caliph, al-Amir bi-Ahkam Allah.

Name: Shrine (Mausoleum) of Sayyida Ruqayya
Dynasty: Hegira 527 / AD 1133 Fatimid
Details: Cairo, Egypt
Justification: Built by Ulam al-Ameriyya, the wife of the caliph, al-Amir bi-Ahkam Allah, this shrine is famous for its exquisite architecture, lavish decoration and carved wooden furniture.

Name: Rectangular piece of wood
Dynasty: Hegira 5th century / AD 11th century Fatimid
Details: Museum of Islamic Art
Cairo, Egypt
Justification: Found among the ruins of the Mamluk sultan al-Nasir Muhammad ibn Qalawun’s bimaristan (hospital) in Cairo, this panel once furnished the hall, designated to Sitt al-Mulk, in the Western Palace.