

Mudéjar Art | The Popular and Religious Mudéjar Style

Mudéjar art in Toledo: the elegance of the brick Gothic style.

The Mudéjar style evident in Toledo shows the influence of the Castilian Mudéjar style in its blind, brick arcades, alongside elements of Almohad and European Gothic art, which are also influential in Mudéjar art in Extremadura. Its defining traits include walls constructed of alternating brick and masonry, façades with friezes of interlinked arches, apertures with framed horseshoe arches, and brick-built bell towers erected on top of masonry cubes sited away from the church as if they were minarets.

Name:
Church of Santiago del Arrabal

Dynasty:
1245–7 Mudéjar

Details:
Toledo, Spain

Justification:
The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:
Church of Santiago del Arrabal

Dynasty:
1245–7 Mudéjar

Details:
Toledo, Spain

Justification:
The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:
Church of Santiago del Arrabal

Dynasty:
1245–7 Mudéjar

Details:
Toledo, Spain

Justification:
The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:
Church of Santiago del Arrabal

Dynasty:
1245–7 Mudéjar

Details:

Toledo, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

---

Name:

Convent of the Conception of St Francis

Dynasty:

Two periods: 13th–15th centuries and 16th century Mudéjar

Details:

Toledo, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:

Convent of the Conception of St Francis

Dynasty:

Two periods: 13th–15th centuries and 16th century Mudéjar

Details:

Toledo, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:

Convent of the Conception of St Francis

Dynasty:

Two periods: 13th–15th centuries and 16th century Mudéjar

Details:

Toledo, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:

Convent of the Conception of St Francis

Dynasty:

Two periods: 13th–15th centuries and 16th century Mudéjar

Details:

Toledo, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

---

Name:
Convent of Santa Úrsula

Dynasty:
Founded in the 13th century; the main structure dates from the 14th century
Mudéjar

Details:
Toledo, Spain

Justification:
The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:
Convent of Santa Úrsula

Dynasty:
Founded in the 13th century; the main structure dates from the 14th century
Mudéjar

Details:
Toledo, Spain

Justification:
The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:
Convent of Santa Úrsula

Dynasty:
Founded in the 13th century; the main structure dates from the 14th century
Mudéjar

Details:
Toledo, Spain

Justification:
The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:
Convent of Santa Úrsula

Dynasty:
Founded in the 13th century; the main structure dates from the 14th century
Mudéjar

Details:
Toledo, Spain

Justification:
The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

---

Name:

Guadalupe Monastery

Dynasty:

Phase one started in 1340; phase two 1389–early 15th century Mudéjar

Details:

Guadalupe, Cáceres, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:

Guadalupe Monastery

Dynasty:

Phase one started in 1340; phase two 1389–early 15th century Mudéjar

Details:

Guadalupe, Cáceres, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:

Guadalupe Monastery

Dynasty:

Phase one started in 1340; phase two 1389–early 15th century Mudéjar

Details:

Guadalupe, Cáceres, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

Name:

Guadalupe Monastery

Dynasty:

Phase one started in 1340; phase two 1389–early 15th century Mudéjar

Details:

Guadalupe, Cáceres, Spain

Justification:

The Mudéjar style, which is particularly suited to interior decoration, borrowed from Gothic art the elegance of its graceful proportions and its pointed arches. The upshot was a new backdrop to religious life.

---